

DLC Training May Newsletter

This month's newsletter focuses on methods of study, particularly distance learning versus classroom study, and the advantages of adapting to the digital era.

As our technological capabilities advance in education, more courses are being designed with online study in mind. The number of distance learning courses available through training providers, colleges and universities seems to be growing in number every year. Although this remote format seems very popular, 65%* of people prefer in-person learning to online study.

Sometimes it's easy to stick to what we know, but with so many benefits to distance learning over classroom study, it's worth questioning what might be the best option for you when moving forward with your professional development.
